Who is

Get to know us before you join

SRJC stands for Sexual Reproductive Justice Coalition - We are a South African Coalition, established in 2015, made up of a community of activists, health workers, researchers, legal experts and organisations advocating for human rights and justice, including by delivering services.

Some highlights of our collective success include advising National Departments of Health and Social Development on policy, winning a legal battle to protect abortion services from mandatory burial of foetal remains etc.

While the threats of Population Control in the brand it took globally from the 1940s-1970s has been widely abandoned, the foundations it is rooted in, white supremacy, capitalism and hetero-normative patriarchy, continue to shape our experiences and safety.

Given this context membership to our community is on a vetted approval basis before individuals and organisations are allowed to enter our spaces, and play an active part in our campaigns and course of direction.

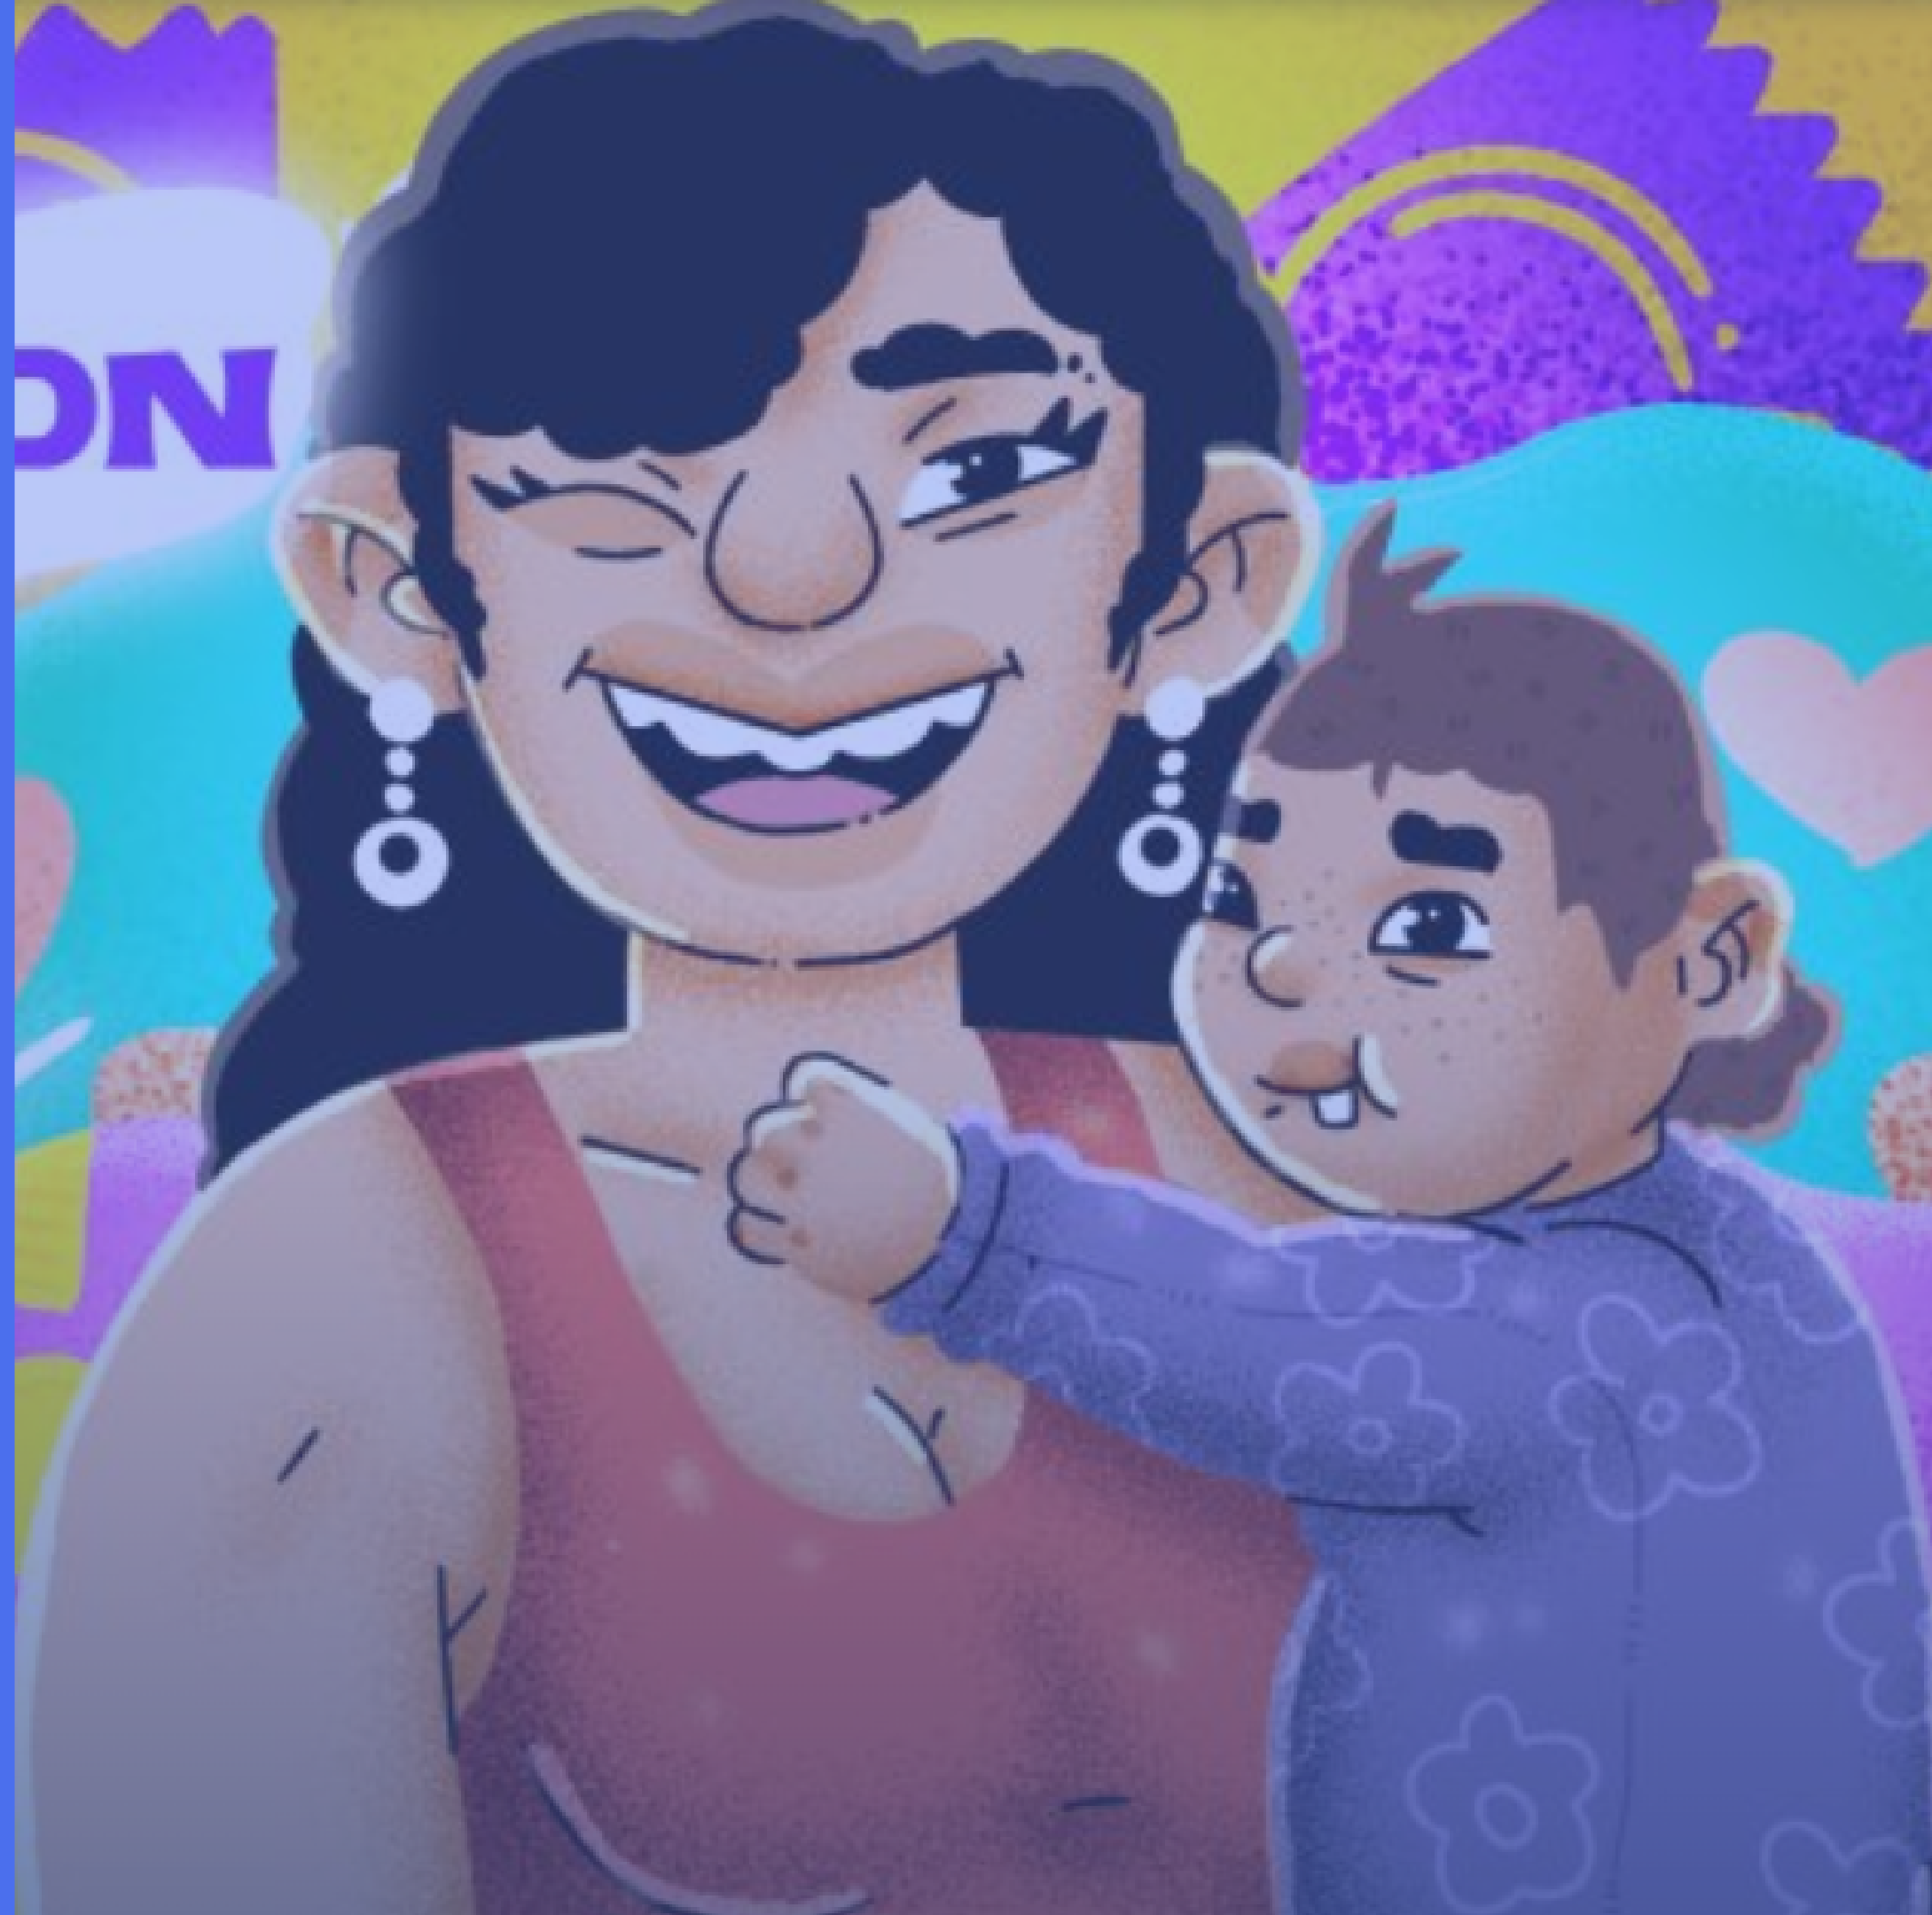

Mission

Our mission is to contribute toward the realisation of sexual and reproductive justice for all. To be a platform for individuals and organisations to mobilise, advocate and produce and use evidence to realise our mission. To do so we create informed public debate and build consensus to hold policy makers and duty-bearers accountable on sexual and reproductive health.

Vision

A future of sexual and reproductive justice informed by an intersectional perspective. Where all people, irrespective of class, race, gender, sexual orientation, gender expression, disability, age, religion, and any other characteristic may enjoy their sexuality, make reproductive decisions and access high quality services that enhance their dignity, bodily autonomy, integrity and well-being.
